

Health.

Education.

Environment.

The o-cello Corporation started as a cellophane film manufacturing and processing industry in 1965.

Since then, we expanded our products and business to meet the needs of the times. No matter what decade we are in, we strive to make a social contribution with our business, which needs the originality and passion of our workers.

Our mission is creating a more affluent society in which people and nature are in harmony.

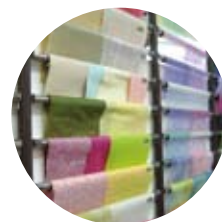

The concept is Health, Education, Environment, and to expand business we will challenge new business opportunities and make our dream bigger.

the way a company's lives are itself. I think that my biggest job as a manager is to create a good environment where employees can take an active part and create a good environment that can draw out their own power. To that end, we aim to create a workplace environment that can work both physically and mentally and with a willingness, encourage learning and community activities after work, and to develop human resources that are useful not only in the company but also in the community.

We aim to become a "one-of-a-kind company" with all employees developing bright, energetic and creative culture, and want to advance business management.

We look forward to your continued progress with everyone's lives.
